At the age of 20, few people are as definite about their career choice as Emily Chan was. Her parents hoped that she would follow the family tradition and become a respected doctor, but she had a strong desire to do humanitarian (人道主义的) aid work.

On her teacher's recommendation, she joined a United Nations humanitarian project in southern Africa. It was the first time she had seen a world torn by war, disaster and disease, and it made her realise that she wanted a life different from that of her parents.

Since she made her decision, Chan has had lots of experiences bringing care and hope to people around the world. In Kosovo, she had a gun pointed at her forehead while transporting a pregnant patient to another safe place. In Cambodia, she rescued young girls from dangerous situations. In Thailand, she helped people with AIDS to discover their self-respect and start a new life.

Decades later, Chan is now the CEO of GX Foundation based in Hong Kong, China. As part of her role, she shows young people how to provide humanitarian assistance to countries participating in the Belt and Road Initiative.

Welcoming a new pet can be a magical moment for a lot of people. Unfortunately, many new pet owners can take a while to adjust to their pets. According to a famous dog trainer, Nicole Ellis, following certain steps will help you become closer to your pets.

This should go without saying but spending time with your pets can greatly help you form a relationship with them. Cats, dogs, and other animals love to be included in the activities of their humans. Whether it is watching TV at home or going on duties, make sure your pets are with you and enjoying themselves.

Another thing to bear in mind is that playtime between owners and their pets is a good way to share fun moments together. Cats love playing with balls of yarn (毛线) and fishing pole toys. Dogs, on the other hand, are more social and usually love playing games with tennis balls. It is important to learn what type of play your pets enjoy. Just like individual humans are different, animals are different from each other, too.

Most people forget that training pets and teaching them tricks is a healthy way for them and their pets. Whether you are teaching them a simple command like "sit" or something more complex, your pets are sure to enjoy your company and will love you very much.

- () 36. Welcoming a new pet can be _____ for some new pet owners.
- A. easy
 - B. strange

B) 阅读下面短文，从短文后的选项中选出可以填入空白处的最佳选项。

Doing sports is very important for maintaining our health, as it is not only good for our heart but also helps us stay physically fit. There's no denying that physical activity plays a crucial role in enhancing our overall well-being.

41 My friend Lyndon, who used to be frail and would get tired easily, has transformed himself through running. He shared that after consistently running every morning for three months, he noticed a remarkable improvement in his overall strength. 42 This demonstrates how sports can dramatically boost one's physical capabilities.

Another friend of mine, Jean, had a bad cold last winter that caused persistent coughing and sleepless nights. Her doctor advised her to incorporate more physical activity into her routine. 43 As a result, she has not only regained her health but also joined a badminton club, where she's made many new friends who love sports too.

44 Not only do they make us physically stronger, but they also help us relax, feel happier and meet new people. In conclusion, when we participate in sports regularly, we open the door to a happier, healthier lifestyle. 45

- A. Let's all enjoy sports and keep healthy!
- B. Consequently, she began playing badminton with me after school.
- C. Now, he's so energetic that he has become an excellent basketball player.
- D. Let me share my friends' experiences with sports.
- E. Sports benefit us in many ways.
41. _____ 42. _____ 43. _____ 44. _____ 45. _____

五、语法填空（10小题，共20分）

阅读下面短文，在空格处填入一个适当的词或用括号中词语的正确形式填空。

When I 46 (arrive) at my class that morning, immediately I felt depressed and 47 (comfortable). That day was the day 48 our teacher would leave and move to another school.

Miss White was 49 extremely likable woman. She was very easy to talk 50 and to have fun with. She was nice and always 51 (friend) whenever you saw 52 (she). I couldn't even imagine how things were going to be without her. As I entered the classroom, the atmosphere was heavy with sadness. I heard some of my classmates 53 (cry). We couldn't find a way to express our 54 (sad) and also we couldn't find a way to express our love to the respectable woman.

The thought of not seeing her familiar face every day was heartbreaking. We had shared so many memories together, from lively classroom discussions to fun activities. She had been a source of inspiration and support for all of us.

Reflecting on that moment today, maybe that day wasn't the 55 (bad) day after all. That day was just a moment of my life that I would never forget. And I know that wherever Miss White goes, she will continue to inspire and enrich the life of countless students.
